Communicating

Academic excellence for all students is the No. 1 goal of Chesterfield County Public Schools. Because communication between school and home improves student success, the school system is providing Edline in every middle and high school as an additional resource to help parents and students track academic progress and improve achievement.

What is Edline?

Edline is a comprehensive web-based solution that gives parents and students direct access to school information. Thousands of schools in all 50 states and many countries use Edline, which has a proven record of success and security.

Chesterfield County Public Schools benefited last year from having Edline in every high school. The system was well-received by students, teachers and parents and is expanding in 2008 to include every Chesterfield middle school. As Chesterfield County Public Schools prepares students for their futures, Edline demonstrates the school system's commitment to the 21st-century skills of technology, digital-age literacy, effective communication, global connections and inventive thinking.

Parents and students can

- view grades and assignments
- see homework and activity calendar
- access student's schedule
- e-mail teachers

Log in anywhere

Parents and students can log in from any computer with Internet access. A confidential log-in and password provide individual access for students; parents have their own log-in and password.

Up to date

Edline is fast. Each student's unique "combined calendar" displays homework, test dates and events from all class activity pages. Parents will know when assignments are due. Students will be responsible for their work including work missed because of absences.

Every teacher will maintain a presence on Edline including a page for each class. Teachers will be able to post assignments on Edline even before they are assigned in class. Teachers will update grades at least once every two weeks. E-mail alerts will notify parents and students when new grade reports are available.

The calendar feature allows teachers to post all assignment dates as well as school and club activities.
